

UnivIS - Lehrveranstaltungsplan

The image displays a detailed course schedule grid for the summer semester 2019. The grid is composed of numerous small cells, each representing a potential course slot. Most of these cells are shaded grey, indicating they are either not used or their details are obscured. Several cells are highlighted in white, representing active course offerings. These white cells are arranged in a structured manner, with one large white area in the top-left quadrant, another in the middle-left, and a third in the middle-right. The grid is bordered by a vertical bar on the left side, which likely contains course identifiers or other administrative information. The overall layout is dense and organized, typical of a university's course catalog or planning tool.